

Are you interested in earning a Masters Degree that includes ESOL certification courses? If so, please consider Clemson University's new

MEd in Teaching and Learning

In an effort to respond to the professional needs of educators today, we have designed our new MEd program to be as flexible as possible and customizable to your interests and needs. Programs can be cross-discipline, across a range of grade levels, and will emphasize subject matter that will directly address challenges facing your schools. Establishing a district cohort not only provides students with a reduced tuition rate but also affords students opportunities to learn within a social context, an essential ingredient to a meaningful and worthwhile educational experience. The 30-hour program consists of 6 required CORE courses and 4 elective Specialty courses that will result in add-on certification in ESOL.

6 Required CORE Courses (all courses can be taught online)

- Cultural Diversity
- Educational Tests and Measures
- Classroom Research
- Advanced Educational Psychology
- Educational Research Methods
- Curriculum Theory

4 Elective Specialty Courses in ESOL:

- Principles and Strategies for Teaching English Speakers of other Languages
- Introduction to Linguistics
- Teaching Reading and Writing to Culturally and Linguistically Diverse Students
- Practicum in the Instruction of ESOL for Elementary and Secondary Learners

For More Information, Contact:
Rebecca F. Kaminski, EdD
krebecc@clemson.edu
Coordinator, MEd in Teaching and Learning and Add-On Certification Programs 864-250-6723