

Individual Graduation Plan (IGP)

The IGP is a document that states the student's intentions related to courses that are taken during high school. The courses that are taken are determined in part on where the student's interests lie. It can be modified over time as interests and skills develop or change. The IGP is like a road map to the future: if the student stays on course, the student will reach the destination – graduation – with all the courses, skills and experience needed to take his education or career to the next level. Each year the student, parents/guardians, and counselors will review and update the plans for the coming year. Switching clusters or majors as the high school years progress and the student learns more about his interests and skills is okay. It is just as important for a student to learn that he doesn't like a particular major as it is for him to learn he does. Just remember: This is a road map to the future.
